Chapter One: Living rough

Cat roamed from street to street, his tummy rumbling and his body tired.

The nights were drawing in and the cold seeped through his tiny frame.

Exhausted and hungry, he found a parked car to rest his weary soul and crouched uncomfortably underneath it.

From his hiding place, he knew he had to remain watchful and alert. There were many dangers after all, especially at night.

Stray and vicious dogs would sometimes sniff him out from under the car and chase him.

Feral cats would often bully him.

Car headlights would blind him.
