Introduction by the Editor.

Charles and I are in one way or another total opposites, that's why we learn so much from each other. I never judge people for their lifestyle. I try to understand what lives in the minds and hearts of other people. I found my inspiration in bhakti yoga, as well as in the Bible, the Torah and the Holy Quran. May it inspire others as well.

The traditional bhakti has four regulatory precepts called vidhi (from the Sanskrit root vidha, to put in order), S.B. 1.17:24 and 12.3:18: the ban on eating meat, fish and eggs; no sex outside of marriage (and within it reserved for procreation); no narcotics such as drugs and alcohol; the prohibition of gambling or speculating with money. These precepts are derived from the eternal values of the religion (dharma), also called 'the four legs of the bull of dharma': śauca, purity; satyam, truthfulness; tapas, austerity and asceticism; daya, compassion.

In the present age of spiritual decay, the so-called "dark age" (kali yuga) which we are currently living through according to Hindu tradition, which began with the passing of Sri Krishna thousands of years ago, these "taurus legs" have been severely weakened. Thus, by means of bhakti-yoga, the society of a righteous humanity is literally 'set up' again. The observance of said values is considered by all Hindus as the basis for practicing their religion, which is officially called the Sanātana Dharma ("the eternal religion"). They represent to the Hindu the same value as the Ten Commandments to the Christians. We are within a small golden age within Kali Yuga in which devotees or bhakti yogis from all religions are still present, Gods are still worshipped and sacred literature is still available. Make this life a success through devotion to God, so that you can return to Godhead, never having to reincarnate again.

Some scribbles and bibles. Too many lines not yet crossed in my musical history. "Ain't much fun", Wings, McCartney band on the run. Hope keeps me breathing but at the (same) time I'm all but ready. Call the nearest doctor snuggles this hard way rehab from the most dangerous of all drugs in the (legal) world is definitely alcohol. Oh how I miss this little bit of Jack & coca cola, any brand will be fine when my budget lawyer has my most urgent things settled I'm done.

It's sure as hell, stay behind the point of no return. I've seen death creeping around in freezing winter time, but also in the heat (midst) of summer this gipsy curse of corona better stand away from me. Better is always never be wise nosed in the Brood / Lademacher never be clever way. Anyhow you wear me into the deepest whirlpool sucking me down into the tornado ways. Please say you want to see me touring one time. Be at one with family. Juulz & friend.

Why? My main man of the private all stars. I've got to contact him before he loses faith in my collaboration for his debut real pressed cd. Anyway, mark who works in computers has promised to bring a new computer so that I can type my own manuscript instead of having to rely on Kristo Gabriel van Hooymissen. I hope he's working on the biography of my artistic and musical history. It would bring me one step further on the ladder of success. And I need to now wait until Wednesday for my personal budget lawman.

I'm waiting impatiently for these configurations and writings of mine to reach the public eyes and ears. When the word of my soberness is out into the domain. Never in my entire life I have felt so close to global success. If one (point one) people are ready for me being on brave new books with another contract for two books a year. Singing and also proof that me, myself and I can get
