

François is a little nervous.
He checks his travel bag for the umpteenth time.
When he's sure he has packed everything,
he's ready to leave.

His family waves goodbye.
“We hope you succeed, François.
Good luck with your mission!”
they shout after him.

François has been traveling for days.
He's tired from the journey and looks for a place to rest.
He lands on a windowsill and studies his map carefully.

Fortunately, he's still headed in the right direction.
How many more days until I reach my destination?
he wonders.

